TRIVIA RIVALS AGREE ON ONE FINAL ANSWER

Six years after a stolen table in a Chicago bar, Maya and Jordan say "I do" at Lakeside Barn.

Trivia night, where it all began

HOW WE MET
Our Story

MAYA & JORDAN

It began, as the best stories do, with an argument. Jordan's team claimed the last free table at a crowded trivia night in Chicago. Maya's team claimed it first. Both teams stayed, and Maya's won by a single question about the capital of Australia.

Jordan asked for a rematch. Maya agreed, on the condition that the loser bought tacos. Jordan lost again, bought the tacos and somewhere between the second round and the third basket of chips, the rematch quietly became a first date.

Six years, three apartments and one very loud beagle named Biscuit later, they have played more than two hundred trivia nights together. They still keep score. Neither will tell you who is ahead.

"Somewhere between the second round and the third basket of chips, the rematch became a first date."

LONG STORY SHORT

2019

THE Proposal

Sunrise, a Kayak and a Very Wobbly Ring

Jordan proposed on Lake Mendota at sunrise, after convincing Maya that a 5 a.m. paddle was "a fun, normal thing couples do." The ring came out of a dry bag, nearly went into the lake and the answer was yes before Jordan had finished the question.
